

LearnKey Announces Harassment Prevention Course, Building a More Respectable, Productive Workplace

LearnKey and 1Minute Learning Corp. create new multimedia program to aid companies in providing a more respectable workplace

St. George, Utah —February 13, 2006— LearnKey, Inc., a global provider of online, CD-Rom and Network learning systems, today announced the release of an updated sexual harassment prevention series, Building a More Respectable, Productive Workplace. This series helps businesses comply with state and federal mandates regarding sexual harassment prevention instruction by establishing customized training courses for management and staff.

LearnKey's new customizable learning concept is based on customer feedback, and is unique because it contains both instructor-led and electronic components. "Organizations want custom learning programs that will educate everyone from the receptionists to staff members in satellite locations on these compliance issues," says Jamie Franzman, Vice President of Sales and Marketing for LearnKey. "This program is designed to work as a resource for instructor-led training and mentored learning programs, or a completely self-contained, on demand training program."

This program is truly comprehensive, empowering organizations with customized training on site, in remote locations, individually or in groups. It also allows organizations to accurately manage sexual harassment prevention requirements internally, rather than using expensive outside resources or inconsistent training programs. Unlike text-based programs, this course takes users through real world examples that examine the law, employee/manager roles, rights and responsibilities in sexual harassment, and demonstrates how to deal with and resolve problems at different levels. Upon completion, organizations can print out a certificate of completion for HR and their own personal records, providing records of training completion in the event of an audit.

Sexual harassment hurts productivity, damages morale and costs employers millions of dollars a year. "It is important, not only for employees to understand boundaries in the workplace, but also for supervisors to create an atmosphere conducive to productivity," Franzman says. "Every employee deserves to work in a safe environment. This unique program helps companies and HR departments develop and enforce clear company policies and educate management and staff with flexible, cost-effective training programs."

1 Minute Learning Corporation created the content for the instructor-led and mentored learning portions of the course, and LearnKey developed the e-learning option, resulting in a one-course program package enveloping three different delivery methods.
